35 Years of Service

Three members of staff at Nathalia Primary School, Karen King-Jones, Debbie Inglis and Chris McCallum, have been recognised for their service to Victorian Education. The three have each taught for 35 years in Victorian schools and this was acknowledged at a Regional Ceremony held in Wangaratta on Monday evening.

Museums Victoria

Museums Victoria came to the Nathalia Heritage Centre last week to teach the children about the history of immigration to Australia. The children in grades 3 - 6 from Nathalia Primary School learnt about the 60,000 years when the indigenous people occupied the land prior to European settlement. The children then inspected artefacts and letters from people and families who migrated to Australia. This led to discussion and gathering evidence to establish the reasons why people decided to travel around the world to live in another country.
